Gorges and Little Gorges are a 30 minutes' drive from Victoria Falls town and offer a unique Victoria Falls experience from a peaceful and idyllic base on the edge of the Batoka Gorge. Gorges is famous for its spectacular views, described by some as the best in Southern Africa and for the resident black eagles and lanner falcons which nest in the sheer cliff faces.

As an additional activity, we have included a half day walking safari with the Victoria Falls Anti-Poaching Unit which will offer you a fascinating insight into wildlife conservation in the area.

Conservation: Imvelo recognises that the fate of people and wildlife are inextricably connected. In recognition of this their strategy is to develop lodges on the edges of parks or peripheral areas. The reason for this is twofold; firstly their footprint has less impact on the park and secondly their development is in conjunction with local communities rather than central government. They recognise that communities are the front line of wildlife conservation.

Hwange National Park is one of the few great parks of Africa without any major rivers or lakes. Due to this the park's population of water-dependant species congregate in enormous numbers around the waterholes throughout the dry season. From May to November Imvelo operate and maintain 16 waterholes in and on the borders of the national park which provide essential water to the wildlife during this time of the year.

Along the Batoka Gorge in Hwange District a raptor protection and education programme has been developed. A number of birds of prey nest in the communal area portion of the gorge – black eagles, lanner, peregrine and taita falcons, augur buzzards and bathawk. In just one example, previously villagers in this area persecuted the bathawks believing they kill young livestock and poultry. Through Imvelo's education and protection programme this trend has been reversed and the raptors in the Batoka Gorge are enjoyed by guests daily.

Other conservation initiatives include: conservation through rural conservation awareness, anti-poaching initiatives and support and presence and support in peripheral areas.

Scorpions and Cobras Anti-Poaching Unit: Imvelo have been instrumental in the development of the Scorpions and Cobras Anti-Poaching Units based in Hwange National Park. They have provided extensive support in the form of wages, training, supplies, bedding and tents and communication equipment as well as reports and information from our friends in the villages. Scorpions have been responsible for the collection of large numbers of wire snares but more importantly detecting incursions by international ivory poachers and directing police and National Parks in captures and arrests.

In 2015, following many years of continuous work on the anti-poaching front, the Bushlife Support Unit was set up, uniting the Zambezi Valley community together in a consolidated effort to stop poaching in the area.

The Bushlife Support Unit is very challenging work - trackers are deployed daily in vehicles and boats, mostly bought through donations, where a team of expert rangers are on the search for poachers on both land or river - countless arrests have been made subsequently saving the lives of wildlife in Mana Pools National Park. The Bushlife Painted Wolf Conservancy is a branch of Bushlife Support Unit Trust and specialises in research and conservation of the endangered African Wild Dog.

Today you will head back at leisure to Chilo Gorge Safari Lodge for one more night on a fully inclusive basis.

Conservation: Sustainability and conservation are central to everything we do at Chilo Gorge Safari Lodge and we understand that the local community is vital to protect the park. The first CAMPFIRE programme (Communal Areas Management Programme for Indigenous Resources) in Zimbabwe was started here and its principles have since been replicated across Africa and the rest of the world.

Over the years, guns have been replaced by cameras, and local people and visitors alike have learned to appreciate the animals as they should be; unmolested in their natural habitat. In recognition of his unswerving commitment Clive Stockhill – founder of Chilo Gorge - was awarded the Prince William Award for Conservation in 2013.

“If you are a conservationist, your problem is all about space, so deal with human pressures first. CAMPFIRE has turned conflict into cooperation and everyone has benefitted. The community is happy, the parks are happy and the animals are happy. Everyone wins. ”
